Employee portion

What are you most excited about at work?

To make things happen, efficiently, w/ quality outputs.
Improve process in place by questionning the status quo.

When you're at your best, how do you best contribute?

Problem solving. Provide solutions mitigating risk while delivering for the customer.
Quick learner, able to understand the mission he is given and act upon it.
Building efficient and scalable tools to support my stakeholders

Which Leadership Principles do you demonstrate when you are at your best?

Invent and Simplify
Leaders expect and require innovation and invention from their teams and always find ways to simplify. They are externally aware, look for new ideas from everywhere, and are not limited by "not invented here." As we do new things, we accept that we may be misunderstood for long periods of time.

Are Right, A Lot
Leaders are right a lot. They have strong judgment and good instincts. They seek diverse perspectives and work to disconfirm their beliefs.

Insist on the Highest Standards
Leaders have relentlessly high standards - many people may think these standards are unreasonably high. Leaders are continually raising the bar and drive their teams to deliver high quality products, services and processes. Leaders ensure that defects do not get sent down the line and that problems are fixed so they stay fixed.

What growth ideas do you have for yourself?

If the team is to be restructured, I'd like to have direct reports.

Are there any Leadership Principles you want to focus on for growth?

Learn and Be Curious
Leaders are never done learning and always seek to improve themselves. They are curious about new possibilities and act to explore them.

Hire and Develop the Best
Leaders raise the performance bar with every hire and promotion. They recognize exceptional talent, and willingly move them throughout the organization. Leaders develop leaders and take seriously their role in coaching others. We work on behalf of our people to invent mechanisms for development like Career Choice.

Feedback

You bring a lot of strengths to your work at Amazon. What stands out for me is:

Fabrices super power is his knowledge of programs & solutions to support the teams tech needs. The trackers he has introduced have raised the bar in the teams reporting as well as simplified the approach. A highly effective team member who's structured approach has raised the bar. Nothing is too much trouble - very proactive

Here are the super powers your peers provided:

> Fabrice has a long experience in the company , changing line of business and his role few times and always being capable to manage new challenging projects . He always demonstrate his professional skills and capability to manage the stress typical of new Business line launch in a professional and structured manner . He is always a reference point of contact for everibody .

> Fabrice is a professional with great skills and experience. He knows the company dynamics in depth and is often able to anticipate and interpret the client's requests. Demonstrates high interdisciplinary skills and human sensitivities on a daily basis, greatly aiding the development of work.

> Fabrice is a superhero, I learned from him both technical skills and how true Amazonians behaves.
> His superpowers:
> - Bias For Action - he never stop building new things
> - Customer Obsession - he understood my needs and made tools that simplified my job
> - Deliver Results - all know the impact he made on launches

> Fabrice is a very well organized and methodically working person. He has lived in many countries and can speak many languages which makes him ideal for the position he is in as he can understand the difficulties and problems each of the countries he deals with have in a very hands on manner. He is always happy to help out and this together with his professionalism make it a pleasure working with him

> Fabrice is the Tech-Master par excellence, may it be EXCEL, may it be Wiki, whatever has any connection to a PC, I´d ask Fabrice. Always very helpful and an absolutely remarkable colleague I really enjoy working with!

> Fabrice's role has been split this year into Launch and TDD. In both he has shown a propensity for strong bias for action whist diving deep technically into the roles and problems. He is very personable and earns trust through his actions.

> I consider Fabrice as a mentor, and his super power the ability of earning trust. He's a real team player and his energy and positivity is a great flywheel for the whole team. I think Fabrice has a special gift on jumping on issues and lean them down in order the deliver the needed results, no matter how hard the complition process is.

> It is always a pleasure working wit Fabrice as you can expect a clear, concise and effective support on any of his specific subject matters, while at the same time getting a quick referral to the right person if outside his scope.

> Self-confidence. Fabrice is always convinced he has a better way to do things and backs his own ability. Capable of providing useful supporting tools for the wider team. Happiest exploring ways to support decisions.

The Leadership Principles are a key component of Amazon culture. Your peers, direct reports (if applicable), and I think you best demonstrate the following Leadership Principles:

Invent and Simplify
4 responses (1 manager, 3 peers)

Leaders expect and require innovation and invention from their teams and always find ways to simplify. They are externally aware, look for new ideas from everywhere, and are not limited by "not invented here." As we do new things, we accept that we may be misunderstood for long periods of time.

Earn Trust
4 responses (1 manager, 3 peers)

Leaders listen attentively, speak candidly, and treat others respectfully. They are vocally self-critical, even when doing so is awkward or embarrassing. Leaders do not believe their or their team's body odor smells of perfume. They benchmark themselves and their teams against the best.

Ownership
3 responses (3 peers)

Leaders are owners. They think long term and don't sacrifice long-term value for short-term results. They act on behalf of the entire company, beyond just their own team. They never say "that's not my job."

Learn and Be Curious
3 responses (3 peers)

Leaders are never done learning and always seek to improve themselves. They are curious about new possibilities and act to explore them.

Insist on the Highest Standards

Leaders ensure that defects do not get sent down the line and that problems are fixed so they stay fixed.

Bias for Action
3 responses (1 manager, 2 peers)

Speed matters in business. Many decisions and actions are reversible and do not need extensive study. We value calculated risk taking.

Deliver Results
3 responses (3 peers)

Leaders focus on the key inputs for their business and deliver them with the right quality and in a timely fashion. Despite setbacks, they rise to the occasion and never settle.

Customer Obsession
2 responses (2 peers)

Leaders start with the customer and work backwards. They work vigorously to earn and keep customer trust. Although leaders pay attention to competitors, they obsess over customers.

Hire and Develop the Best
1 response (1 peer)

Leaders raise the performance bar with every hire and promotion. They recognize exceptional talent, and willingly move them throughout the organization. Leaders develop leaders and take seriously their role in coaching others. We work on behalf of our people to invent mechanisms for development like Career Choice.

Dive Deep
1 response (1 peer)

Leaders operate at all levels, stay connected to the details, audit frequently, and are skeptical when metrics and anecdote differ. No task is beneath them.

We know that leaders are never done learning and always seek to improve themselves. Below are the growth ideas your co-workers and I provided. We hope you find these ideas useful.

Growth ideas from me:

i think Fabrice would benefit from deep diving into the reports & understanding where they will not meet the approval teams requirements. Risk keep changing the bar height & we need to keep up. Additionally, Fabrices responses to his customers can seem a bit short & more reasoning around his explanations would assist

Growth ideas from your peers:

> Considering his skills and experience accumulated in different roles, that Fabrice is a candidate for a position in which he can manage a team directly.

> Fabrice has capability and skills that can be transferred to new entry subject in the Company , either internal or external . His Know how is valuable and can be transmitted to new entries .

> Fabrice is a very nice person but sometimes he can seem to be very straight forward without showing the willingness for a middle way or flexibility in his job related issues. I personally know he would always do everything possible but other who might not know him that good, might get a different feeling. Just for him to keep in mind to always stay friendly and helpful and others will react the same way you acted on them earlier.

> Fabrice should use his knowledge to develop other team members. He needs to not settle for the status quo of how things are currently done and implement more scalable systems.

> Fabrice would be more effective by fully committing with team decisions, even when his approach has not been adopted. His tendency to 'discretionary implementation' and periods of non-communication create frustration for multiple stakeholder groups. Does not perform as he could.

> Frankly, I don't think there are many areas of improvement for Fabrice. I believe he, as I am, is not a very political person and this may have limited his growth in Amazon. The same suggestion that I give to myself is to workaround this "lack" of political skills.

> Have only seen the positive sides for now :).

> I think Fabrice could maybe benefit from thinking big more often as he needs to 'promote' his good work a bit more and get on the stage more often. He is a great asset to the company and he needs this to be known more.

> I think Fabrice is great on operational activities and making projects go live even in the hardest conditions. When it comes to administrative process, I think Fabrice can develop further his invent and simplify skills. I also think it's a pity for Fabrice being an individual contributor: I think he would be great as people manager.

Here are the Leadership Principles your peers, direct reports (if applicable), and I suggest you focus on for growth:

Think Big
5 responses (1 manager, 4 peers)

Thinking small is a self-fulfilling prophecy. Leaders create and communicate a bold direction that inspires results. They think differently and look around corners for ways to serve customers.

Earn Trust
4 responses (1 manager, 3 peers)

Leaders listen attentively, speak candidly, and treat others respectfully. They are vocally self-critical, even when doing so is awkward or embarrassing. Leaders do not believe their or their team's body odor smells of perfume. They benchmark themselves and their teams against the best.

Dive Deep
2 responses (1 manager, 1 peer)

Leaders operate at all levels, stay connected to the details, audit frequently, and are skeptical when metrics and anecdote differ. No task is beneath them.

Have Backbone; Disagree and Commit
2 responses (2 peers)

Leaders are obligated to respectfully challenge decisions when they disagree, even when doing so is uncomfortable or exhausting. Leaders have conviction and are tenacious. They do not compromise for the sake of social cohesion. Once a decision is determined, they commit wholly.

Customer Obsession
1 response (1 peer)

Leaders start with the customer and work backwards. They work vigorously to earn and keep customer trust. Although leaders pay attention to competitors, they obsess over customers.
